[...]as, among other things, a mistrial should be declared. ¶43 This Court declines to consider whether the trial court erred in granting a mistrial because appellant has not provided a transcript of the parties' proceedings on the motion for mistrial. See Ariz. R. Crim. P. 31.8(b)(1); Ariz. R. Sup. Ct. 111; Anderson, 211 Ariz. at 353 ¶ 5, 121 P.3d at 332. Moreover, even if we were to consider whether the trial court abused its discretion in granting the mistrial, we would affirm the judgment because the trial court has wide discretion over the declaration of a mistrial. See Anderson, 211 Ariz. at 353 ¶ 2, 121 P.3d at 332. ¶44 Appellant's closing argument was "inappropriate and reprehensible." However, nothing in the record established that it prejudiced Hufelt. The trial court had Hufelt testify that he was "scared" and "upset" by appellant's statements, which did not include any inculpatory statements. ¶45 Even if we were to find that appellant's statements were "inappropriate," that would not have established that the trial court abused its discretion in declaring a mistrial because that is exactly what "[o]ur system relies upon"—"the ability of f678ea9f9e
